Brazos River Flood Update

The Brazos River remained at 22.40 feet at the Brazoria Reservoir at 2 p.m. on Friday, June 10th. Oyster Creek at the Dow pump station near the intersection of FM 2004 and Lake Road is at 17.51 feet. This is down from a high of 17.62 feet back on June 8th. We haven't been at the 17.51 level since June 6th. The Bastrop Bayou is very slowly receding.

However, the Northwood Subdivision still is holding a lot of water in the streets. Our hope is that the rate of recession accelerates tonight and into the weekend.

Good news is that the Brazos River water level at Rosharon has dropped below 50.80 feet, the level at which water gets out of the river at the Harris Reservoir. It was at 50.50 feet at 3 p.m. today, June 10th.

So, if the rain stays away we can begin to see improvement over the next few days.
